

User's guide

This dictionary is comprised of one main section called the List of titles, of two indexes, the Index of composers and the Index of names, and of appendixes on Bach's cantatas and on the Psalms. Apart from the following guide, the introductory paragraphs of each section present additional comments, explanations or abbreviations used in each particular section.

List of titles

When one is looking for further data on a specific title, the entry in the List of titles will indicate either a straight cross-reference title to go to and under which more information is provided, or the complete information itself. Said information is given in the order of references indicated below. Following this guide, a list of abbreviations, symbols and signs used throughout the book is also provided, with examples of use, as well as a list of cataloguers of music of various composers, with their corresponding key letters.

Order of references

As a rule, with very few exceptions, the following order of references is used.

- Title, in bold type, in strict alphabetical order, starting with the article (if any) in its proper order. Numerous titles are also listed without articles, with a cross-reference leading to the title in full. The Index of composers lists both titles, with and without articles or small words (such as numbers).
- Explanation, source or English translation of the title, in square brackets ([]). Before a translation, an abbreviation indicates the language (such as Fr meaning French); also the word "literally" in parentheses means that it is a literal, not an official, translation, given more so as an explanation. For cross-reference purposes, the title in English may also appear in its alphabetical order in the List of titles, with or without its article, with reference to the original title, appearing as: → title (in italics); this results in two (or more) entries for the same work.
- Also in the [] brackets, additional information about the title, mainly cross-references to other listed titles (again, preceded by → or by an asterisk).
- Black squares (■) indicate that more than one composer are listed for the title (only indicated once); that title is followed by the list of composers (with information for each specific work), in alphabetical order of the composers, each composer being preceded by a black square.
- Composer, usually last name only. Full first and middle names, nicknames, dates and nationalities are given in the Index of composers. For composers with same last name and/or same initial for first name, initials are given before the last name, without punctuation; ex.: Franz Joseph Haydn is shown as FJ Haydn, Michael (Johann) Haydn as M Haydn. The initials used for that purpose in the List of titles are indicated in bold type in the Index of composers (e.g. Franz Joseph Haydn).
- Other title or translation, under which a work would also be known.
- Musical form (indicated when not specifically mentioned in the title).
- Number/order of composition of the work; ex.: symph n.3 (symphony number three), opera (1st, 3rd...).
- Movements; number of movements in the work, or acts (in operas...); ex.: 5mov = five movements, 3a = three acts; when the titles of movements are indicated, they are listed at the end of the entry.
- Parts, indicated in types and number of instruments, voices, electronic music...
- Key signature; ex.: in A (means A major); in a (means A minor).
- Opus number; the mention op.5/3 indicates opus 5 number 3.
- Catalogue number, in lieu of, or in addition to, an opus number (see the list of cataloguers).
- Year (in parentheses) as year of composition, first public performance, publication or recording; the abbreviation "c" (for circa) is used to indicate approximate dates.
- Comments, as additional miscellaneous information relating to the work, particularly titles of movements; author or person on which the work is based; people, places or things that inspired the work; occasionally name of librettist for an opera, choreographer for a ballet, director for a film; mention of an excerpt bearing another known title; other arrangements or revisions of the work or the title; list of titles of movements of larger works... For individuals mentioned, usually only the last name is given; the full first and middle names, dates and nationalities are indicated in the Index of names. An asterisk preceding a name indicates that the Index of names lists more than one reference for that name. For persons with the same last name, an initial alone (without a period) is shown before the last name.

Also, see special entries with explanations, in the List of titles, at: Abbreviations in titles, Articles, Bach's cantatas, Dates in titles, ...iana, Notation letters and syllables, Numbers in titles, Psalms, Years in titles.

Index of composers

Order of references for the Index of composers (and for the Index of names)

First and middle names, last name in bold type, nickname or pseudonym, dates, abbreviated nationality or language (in parentheses, with, occasionally, an arrow → between two nationalities indicating a change of nationality or country of residence), miscellaneous information about relationships with other listed names (also in parentheses), followed by, in alphabetical order, the titles appearing in the List of titles, most without their initial articles in order to save space and avoid duplication (cross references will lead to the full title), and mainly where the name of the composer is mentioned, either immediately after the indication of a title, or in the description of the title, for any other purpose connected with the title, such as a dedication, an inspiration, an arrangement... For composers or individuals with a similar last name, the code letters used as their initials in this document are indicated in bold type in the Index of composers (e.g. Franz Joseph Haydn).

Examples

Richard Adler 1921-2012 (American): Damn Yankees - Pajama Game - ...
